

Talk to your employer

Here's a fun fact: over 80% of conference attendees' costs are paid by their employers.

The Collaborative Compliance Conference

Keep your office or business up to date and in compliance.

It's simple: keeping yourself informed and up to date benefits not only you, but your entire company. What you bring home can help your office stay in compliance with all the latest regulations and code changes — which helps your office preserve revenue.

You'll also learn how to be more efficient, how to navigate key issues, become privy to some best practices and important industry updates, which can help increase your company's bottom line.

Get your employer to register you for the Conference:

- 1 Be prepared. We'll be announcing our agenda soon! When available, review the agenda and be prepared to highlight sessions that complement your skills and capabilities.
- 2 Focus on continuing education. Tell your supervisor that this 2-day virtual event is a great way for you to earn CEUs, along with gaining insight on best practices from leading experts in the industry.

- 3 Don't be afraid to ask. Educate your supervisor on how the knowledge you'll take away from the conference will help you and your team. Remember, you're not just doing something to help your work, your bringing something back that can help the business.

Using these steps, we're confident you can make a strong case to convince your boss or business decision maker to cover your registration for the Collaborative Compliance Conference.
